When it comes to movie genres, comedy is by far my favorite, but thriller is another genre that I like to watch from now and then. I like when you get really scared and you start to lift your feet off the ground because something under your bed is going to grab you.

I have a little different opinion on thriller or scary movies. Such as, I do not think "Willy Wonka and The Chocolate Factory" is scary at all. I personally don't understand the terror in a big room made of chocolate. The only thing I would be scared about is if I were dreaming.

1. Well first on the list is "Silence of the Lambs"; I don't know about you but the idea a man kidnapping me and cutting off my skin to make a WOMAN body suit for himself... just gives me the heebie jeebies! I am sure many people (including myself) will never look at Ted Levine (creepy dude) the same.

2. "The Ring" was the first real scary child movie that I saw. So of course it was really freaky at the time. I was afraid to watch TV incase the little girl started to crawl through it! If you watch that video then you were dead meet. I thought that the twist on how to save yourself was pretty lame because I do not think that would have stopped the evil murdering child.

3. Another creepy child movie is the "The Grudge"; when I hear "ehhh" it sends chills up my spine. I mean I don't understand why they decided to make innocent children the evil factor in thriller movies but it worked. Now I can't trust any child I see.

4. "Cry Wolf" was an interesting movie. It only comes in number four because when I was watching this movie I was intrigued by who the murderer was but to find out that it was all a hoax left me sort of bummed. Not too scary after you find out nobody died in the first place.

5. "Stay Alive" is a creepy movie, even the title is scary. Yeah, it is about staying alive in a game but this freaky physco dead lady is coming out of the game to kill anybody who dies in the twisted video game. It almost made me scared to play Frogger because I might get run over by a monster truck!

6. Next is "The Exorcism of Emily Rose"; When I saw this movie, I was introduced to evil spirits in someone. I had no idea what exorcism meant so I just thought this girl was crazy. Then it was explained to me and it scared me that something like that could happen to someone I know.

7. "When A Stranger Calls" is one of the more scary movies on the list because I think this is one of those things that you do actually think about when you are home alone at night. I mean I get freaked out if nobody else is home and them suddenly I hear something upstairs. This movie kind of showed that it could happen. Someone may be in your house watching your every move without you even knowing.

8. The next movie is "Untraceable" starring Diane Lane. The movie made me shift in my seat. It was a gruesome one. This guy used the internet to murder selected people. I won't give away the little twist but this guy wanted revenge and he certainly got.

9. "Vacancy" is number nine on our scariest movies list. This movie had a great idea just like "When A Stranger Calls" because this is another fear of mine. When you stay in a motel room that faces the street always scares me because you can never know who can come to your door. Or can you prevent them from scaring the crap out of you in the middle of the night.

10. The tenth and the winner of the scariest movies is "I Know Who Killed Me." It was a super lame movie but god was it horrifying. I am traumatized by how graphic it was. The physco kidnapped this girl (Lindsey Lohan) and tortured the crap out of her. And the director actually showed him putting dry ice on Lindsey Lohan's hand until it turned black then took glass and cut off her finger. I will never be that same!

Kudos to whomever came up with these movies, they must have a pretty twisted mind. But they all entertained me and I like the feeling that I get when I watch these movies. They are all scary in there own way.
